The debate over Google’s "experimental AI" disclaimers highlights growing user frustration. While Google markets AI Overviews and AI Mode as "experimental" features to shift liability away from itself, the reality is that artificial intelligence and machine learning have underpinned its core search infrastructure for years. Google AI Developers Forum +4

The integration of artificial intelligence into Google Search has evolved significantly over the years. Understanding this transition reveals why users debate the "experimental" label:

- Early Machine Learning: Long before generative AI, Google utilized machine learning for tasks like understanding the intent behind queries (RankBrain in 2015) and conversational understanding (BERT and MUM). Mail.com +2
- Search Labs and SGE: In 2023, Google invited users to test its Search Generative Experience (SGE) via Google Search Labs to experiment with multi-step reasoning and AI-generated summaries. The Drum +1
- AI Overviews: Starting in 2024, AI-generated summaries began rolling out widely
